You can't go wrong with any of the wines from the Sangiacomo family, iconic growers—and as of 2016, producers—of world-class pinot noir in Sonoma. Winemaker James MacPhail leverages three sites in Carneros and the Petaluma Gap for this juicy pinot, packed with wild ripe and fleshy strawberry fruit, clove and orange peel notes, which dance beside satiny tannins building to a generous deep-berry finish. MacPhail also produces his own chardonnay and pinot noirs under Tongue Dancer Wines, and the current release 2018 Sonoma Coast pinot is a real standout.
